provocative and reflective this volume on the notion of knowledge and innovation in the business industry provides readers with a holistic approach to the subject of knowledge structuring their arguments around four case studies of innovation within four entirely different contexts. Håkansson and Waluszewski invite the business minded reader to consider the costs of adopting new knowledge and innovation within a business setting. This book questions the long held assumption that new knowledge and innovation are universally advantageous. It follows the tremor of an innovation as new knowledge reverberates through or is dampened by the larger economic community including cultural structures, the industrial standards and the foundational assumptions that rule a particular economic domain. It focuses in particular on the interfaces where the innovative agent connects to its customers, suppliers and competitors. An ideal reference source for postgraduate students taking advanced courses in science and technology studies, innovation management, industrial marketing and purchasing, technological development and innovation systems.

First published in 1998, this influential volume entered the debate on foreign direct investment in the UK and focuses on the role of multinational enterprises (MNEs) in the service rather than manufacturing and primary sectors while the significance of the service industry had been recognised as exceeding 60% of total GDP in some countries at the time of original publication. The role of FDIs has not been fully recognised, thus contributing to a woefully under-researched field covering areas including international trade, the organisational theory of the firm and the UK business sector.

1867-68 include the statistical report of the Secretary of State in continuation of the annual report of the Commissioners of Statistics.
